ABORIGINAL FUTURES

Aboriginal futures is our way of giving back to community - $1 per kilogram of coffee sold will be invested in our Aboriginal futures program.

Our programs are aimed at empowering Aboriginal people to speak our truths and break down barriers of exclusion that prevent First Nation peoples from realizing our potential.

Our Programs:

- Books in Homes
- AIC Creative Grant
- Yarning Workshops
- Barista Training

COMMUNITY | BOOKS IN HOMES

Books written and illustrated by Aboriginal authors and artists are an incredible tool for inspiring our young people.

We work with our partners to deliver culturally relevant books to children across Australia by providing books that:

- Children can take home and read
- Parents and Carers can enjoy with their children
- Are relevant Indigenous children
- Increase young peoples understanding of Indigenous culture
- Help promote reconciliation between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Australians

COMMUNITY | AIC CREATIVE GRANT

Aboriginal stories are important for Indigenous peoples, but also for non-Indigenous peoples because they create human connection, deepen understanding across cultures and aid in reconciliation.

The AIC Creative Grant is offered yearly and supports the skills development of Aboriginal authors and illustrators.

COMMUNITY | YARNING WORKSHOPS

There's a power that comes from meeting, hearing and speaking to people who have overcome challenges in their lives and found a positive path forward.

Yarning workshops target the interests of young people and can take many forms:

- Like the sharing of someone's life story
- Author and Illustrator workshops
- Inspiring talks by Athletes
- Business question and answer sessions

COMMUNITY | BARISTA TRAINING

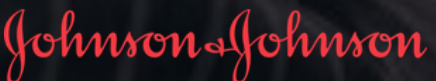

AIC partner with Clontarf to offer barista training to Aboriginal young people from different sections of the community and work with our partners to explore employment opportunities within the hospitality industry.

Our Program will Deliver:

- Real work experience for hospitality
- Participant credit for hospitality qualifications at major facilities management companies
- Enhancement of employment opportunities
- Increased confidence and career purpose
